INTRODUCTION

SECTION A

A. INTRODUCTION

These enrolment projections were produced by a computer model of the public school system in British Columbia which was first developed by B.C. Research 15 years ago. Since then the model has been used to produce up-to-date forecasts annually with the most recent available data. The figures refer to headcount enrolments at the start of the school year in September.

The school system is considered at the school district level. Using a file of historical data, future enrolments are projected for each school district, based on the trends established over the past few years. The results for each school district are summed to give the forecast for the Province as a whole.

The figures produced by the model are then further refined in the Schools Facilities Branch of the Ministry of Education through consultation with the individual school districts. The projections printed in this booklet, therefore, have been mutually agreed to by the Ministry and the school districts as the official Ministry of Education enrolment projections for 1985 to 1989.

Through a co-operative venture involving Health and Welfare Canada, the B.C. Ministry of Education, data from the Family Allowance system are also available. These provide a source of annual age-specific population counts coded on a geographic basis. With recoding into the same school district boundaries as used for the enrolment data, they offer an additional data source for the enrolment model.

Prior to 1979, the District Model related the Grade 1 enrolment to the Birth count occurring six years earlier. Thus Births were projected, the Birth-to-Grade 1 transition ratio was projected, and from these the future Grade 1 enrolments were calculated. Since 1979, the Family Allowance data have provided counts of the population by single years of age from Births through to Age 1 counts in terms of retention ratios, Age 1 counts to Age 2, and so on until Age 4 counts are related to the Kindergarten enrolments. Kindergarten is then related to the Grade 1 enrolments, etc. and the system of cohort retention ratios is complete in single year steps from Birth to Grade 12.

These Family Allowance data first became available in late 1978, with counts having been tabulated on a school district basis dating back to 1976. Ages have been calculated from the children's birth dates, referenced to December 31 of the corresponding year. This makes the age definition consistent with the eligibility rules for starting school. These data have been incorporated into the District Model and form the basis for the Kindergarten and Grade 1 projections. They provide a significant improvement to the model. However, there are some limitations to the Age 1 to Age 4 counts which are discussed in Part B, Assumptions and Limitations of the Model.

ASSUMPTIONS AND LIMITATIONS

SECTION B

B. ASSUMPTIONS AND LIMITATIONS OF THE MODEL

The projections of grade enrolments presented in this report are based on the observed trends in grade enrolments, age counts and birth data in each of the school districts. The Computer model uses a "cohort survival" technique and in its projections makes several important assumptions.

1. Births are projected directly, based on birth data extending back to 1965. They are not related to fertility rates or age specific birth rates of the population. They are projected using an exponential smoothing of the time series of available birth data. Since there is a six year time lag between births and Grade 1 enrolments, the birth projections will have only a minor effect on the overall grade enrolment projections and this effect will not begin until 1989.

2. Grade enrolment projections are based on a projection of retention factors between grades in successive years. The retention factors are projected using exponential smoothing of the time series of retention factors extending back to 1973. The assumption is made that past trends in retention factors will continue over the forecast period. This method implicitly includes such factors as immigration, migration between districts, death rates, failures and drop-outs, since these combine to form the retention rates observed in the historical data. Thus the projections assume that there will be no major departure from past trends in these factors.

3. Age count projections for Age 1 to Age 4 are based on a projection of retention factors between ages in successive years. The projection of age retention ratios is based on a weighted average of historical data. The weighting favours the most recent observation, using integer-valued weights. This method also implicitly includes the above mentioned factors of migration and deaths. Thus the projections assume that there will be no major departure from the recent experience.

In areas, where future development patterns are substantially different from past patterns, these projections may not be realized. Changes in factors such as government policy, land use, zoning and economic development will affect population growth rates and consequently enrolment rates. Where possible, the Schools Facilities Branch and the School Districts have taken such factors into account to produce the final projections.

Limitations to Family Allowance Data

1. The re-coding of school districts depends on the postal code address of the parent receiving the Family Allowance payment. Not all of the postal codes are within the province or correct and not all of the addresses on file have postal codes. As a result it has not been possible to allocate the population counts for "Out of Province Codes" and "Missing Codes", to any of the school districts. Similarly, it is sometimes not appropriate to allocate to one specific school district those postal codes referring to rural routes which cross school district boundaries or those referring to Post Office boxes in large downtown office buildings.

2. The counts prior to 1984 are based on the December Family Allowance files. Generally, the December file reflects the actual population with addresses correct as of three months earlier (i.e. September). Therefore, these are consistent with the September enrolment data. However, the December 1984 file is not yet available. Consequently the 1984 counts are based on the June 1984 data file. Therefore, the time series of data is not actually consistent over the five years.

3. The counts for all five years do not include those children who are in the care and custody of the B.C. Ministry of Human Resources. The exact number of children omitted at each age level, because of this administrative arrangement, is not available at this time. However, it is expected that the total age 0-17 children not included is less than one percent of all the 0-17 children who are recorded in the Family Allowance files.

OVERVIEW OF THE DISTRICT MODEL

SECTION D

D. OVERVIEW OF THE DISTRICT MODEL

The District Model used what is commonly referred to as a "cohort-survival" technique in projecting enrolments. In this process enrolments are projected in one-year steps by applying grade-to-grade retention ratios to cohorts of students as they progress from one grade to the next in successive years. While factors such as migration, death, and grade-promotion policies are not considered explicitly in this process, the retention ratios reflect the net result of these various factors.

The grade-to-grade retention ratios are calculated from enrolment data covering the past 10 years. Reserving the ratios are calculated from the four most recent years as a "test period", the model analyses the earlier values as a time-series. Based upon the trend in these earlier data, the model projects retention ratios over the test period.

In making these projections a set of alternative mathematical methods is available to the model. These methods are all various forms of either one-parameter or two-parameter exponential smoothing techniques which are applied to the time series of retention ratios, the annual rate of change to retention rates, or the annual differences in retention ratios. Smoothed forecasts are obtained by modifying the coefficients of the projections equation by a smoothing constant, Alpha. The value of Alpha signifies the weight given to the most recent observations in determining the equation parameters. In the model the smoothing constant Alpha is chosen to minimize the error in the projections over the test period.

The District Model evaluates all the available methods on the test period data. The most suitable Alpha is determined for each. The method which best fits the test period experience is chosen. Using the Alpha applicable to the selected method, the parameters of the projection equation are then updated with the data from the test period. These updated parameters are used to project retention ratios, extending five years into the future. Applying the projected retention ratios to the previous year's enrolments, the next year's enrolments are calculated. This process is repeated year by year arriving at a five year projection. To start this process, births are projected using a similar procedure applied directly to the time series of births.

It should be made clear at this point that the model makes one very basic, underlying assumption. It is assumed that past trends in retention ratios will continue over the forecast period. This implicitly includes such factors as immigration, migration between districts, death rates, pupil promotions, failures and drop-outs, since these combine to form the retention ratios observed in the historical data. This assumption is an integral part of the District Model.
